Emergency Response during Trucker Strike in Korea

Trucker Strike in Korea

In June 2022, an eight-day trucker strike in South Korea took place. It caused severe disruption at port terminals and industrial hubs, which may increase uncertainty in lead times as well as delays in delivery.

In light of the strike in South Korea, OOCL Logistics has responded quickly to the challenges by contributing with its logistics expertise and providing emergency solutions to customers in need along the supply chain.

Our Emergency Action Plan

The OOCL Logistics Korea team has a diverse pool of trucking partners. With such strong, long-term partnerships providing us a priority for drivers and equipment, OOCL Logistics, was able to maintain service levels for our customers to prevent inventory shortages at stores during this challenging period.

We played a critical role in this project including the communication, negotiation, and coordination. We tracked and supported the delivery plan while monitoring changes in domestic logistics and any market movements in real time.

OOCL Logistics has a distinct advantage due to our strong, long-term partnerships with customers and our people's passion for solving unforeseeable risks. The customer in this specific case was very grateful to the successful emergency plan we implemented during this strike period.

The strike ended on June 14 after the union reached agreements to extend pay guarantees in order to ease truckers' hardship from recent rise in fuel prices. Trucking services have since returned to normal operations.
